Auburn Annual Giving—'67 Produces $128,700

AUBURN'S third annual giving campaign held during calendar 1967 produced gifts amounting to $128,727 from slightly more than 3,300 alumni and friends, or seven and one-half per cent of Auburn's alumni of record. Increased membership in the Century Club (donors of $100 or more) and increased dollar totals by several of the classes graduating prior to 1935 were offsetting factors in the year's effort which fell somewhat short of the 1966 campaign.

Auburn Annual Giving was introduced in 1965 when 2,960 charter contributors, approximately seven per cent of the alumni body, gave $168,000. In 1966 AAG totals climbed to more than $193,000 from 3,560 participants—eight and one-half per cent. Dollar-wise the 1967 campaign compares more favorably with that of the two prior years if it is noted that in both 1965 and 1966 in excess of $50,000 was received in "one-time" gifts. Such gifts were not received in 1967.

Again this year as last a substantial number of alumni participated for the first time in Auburn Annual Giving. However, the loss of former contributors kept the percentage of participation at levels of earlier years. Participation one year, of course, carries no obligation to take part in succeeding years. Annual Giving was launched, though, to encourage alumni to include Auburn in their program of systematic, planned giving.

Many other universities and colleges in the region, whose reports were received at the Auburn Alumni Office, showed healthy gains. The University of Tennessee for the fifth straight year exceeded previous records with more than 16,000 participants. At Georgia Tech, where annual giving is an established means of aiding progress of the institution, participation continued at the 50 per cent level.

As in the past two years Auburn Alumni Annual Giving was almost exclusively a mail campaign—reminding alumni of the key role of an annual gift to help Auburn's advance, primarily through the improvement of its faculty.

One new feature was introduced for AAG—'67: a class agent was named for each class graduating prior to 1936. This agent wrote a letter to each member of his class to enlist his support of Auburn Annual Giving. This is the apparent reason for these classes often showing increased participation and higher dollar totals as compared with the 1966 program.

While the competition among classes is purely informal and unorganized, you may be interested in seeing how your class ranked in its decade and among all classes. The Class of 1908, which has long manifested great class spirit, led the field in 1967 with 22.2 per cent! Close on their heels was the Class of 1914 at 20 per cent. Something to shoot for in 1968? The Class of 1925, holding their 40th anniversary reunion in 1965, marked that occasion by having 43.6 per cent its membership contribute to AAG. That record still stands. Any challengers?

Daily progress on the construction of the Haley Center gives evidence in steel and concrete of Auburn's desire to provide physical facilities that will promote teaching and learning. Annual Giving can help insure that Auburn's physical growth is matched by the continuing development of a faculty of superior abilities.

To All Alumni and Friends:

Annual Giving for 1967 is now history. While I wish that our showing had been better, I believe we have helped to establish more firmly the case for Annual Giving. Ten Alumni Professors and two Artists-in-Residence testify to what our combined efforts can do.

To the more than 3300 who participated in 1967, my sincere thanks for giving tangible expression to your abiding love for Auburn. To those who have not experienced the sense of involvement that comes with aiding the institution that contributed to your development, I submit that AAG-1968 presents that opportunity.

Yours sincerely

AAG—For Teachers Of Superior Talent

The three faculty members shown at left hold professorships established by individuals. But establishing such professorships need not be the province of individuals. Annual Giving provides the means to do together what few individuals can do singly. The ten Alumni Professors and two Artists in Residence pictured at right and bottom of this page hint at the potential to be realized through AAG.

Believing that nothing is more vital to Auburn's future than the continued upbuilding of its faculty, funds provided through Auburn Annual Giving are devoted primarily to establishing Alumni Professorships. The recipients receive a salary supplement for a three-year appointment that is renewable.

Creation of new colleges, expanding enrollments, greater emphasis on graduate study—all help add to the demand for teachers of exceptional ability. Through AAG, you can help Auburn to hold and attract its share of teachers of superior talent.

24 Companies Match Alumni Gifts

An opportunity that apparently is being overlooked by many alumni is the "matching gift" program of nearly 400 companies. Recognizing their stake in quality education and the contribution colleges have made in the development of their employees, these companies match the gifts of their employees to their alma maters. Recently several companies, among them Gulf Oil, have begun to match such gifts on a 2-for-1 basis.

Here is a real opportunity for all alumni working for a "matching" company. Restrictions are few and forms and procedures simple.

Auburn University salutes the following companies for their support of AAG-67 through matching gifts:

ABBOTT LABORATORIES
 ATLAS CHEMICAL INDUSTRIES, INC.
 BURLINGTON INDUSTRIES
 CHRYSLER CORPORATION
 CITIZENS & SOUTHERN NATIONAL BANK
 CORNING GLASS WORKS

To Alumni and Friends:

Having just reviewed the final report for the 1967 Auburn Annual Giving program, I am once again impressed with the devotion of Auburn alumni. For three consecutive years your financial support has materially strengthened the resources needed to continue the development of our faculty.

Impressive as the record of these first years has been, I suggest that we need to press on to new goals. In a day of many appeals, the planned giving concept of Auburn Annual Giving should help you decide which appeals will receive your support. Such considered stewardship may well open up new experience in the satisfaction of generosity that is truly in keeping with your resources.

Support of a university appeals to me because I believe that such institutions represent many of man's noblest aspirations. In aiding the cause of good teaching through support of AAG, we increase the opportunity for the gifted professor to touch many lives. Support of such endeavor helps to allay our concern that our individual efforts no longer have much effect.

To those of you who may have not yet participated in the annual giving program, may I repeat my belief that I know of no finer, more direct manner in which to aid the Auburn we love.

Sincerely,

Harry M. Philpott

Harry M. Philpott
President
